A report on the tornado damage in Madison County has been completed and forwarded to the Springfield, Ill., offices of the federal Small Business Administration (SBA).

Administration (SBA).

In addition to the city being declared a disaster area by Mayor Paul Schuler and Governor James Thompson declaring Madison County a disaster area, the federal government must also make the proclamation before loans and other assistance can be made available to homeowners, businesses and others affected by the tornado and others affected by the tornado process of the county of the co which ripped through Grante City, Pontion Beach and Edwardsville on Friday, April 3. Estimates have placed the damages at $6.5 million countywide with ad-ditional claims still being processed. Norman Davis, an appraiser for the SBA, made a survey of the tornado damage in the county Thursday af-terencon. Accompanying him during a walk-through of the Glenview Sub-division, hardest hit area in Granite City, were: William Eisele, region eight City, were: William Eisele, region eight Services and Disastier Agency (ESDA); Edward Harris, Madison County coordinator of the ESDA; Victor Koenig, Granite City ESDA cor-dinator, and City Engineer Monroe Brewer.

Davis talked with several of the homeowners who were at the sites of their damaged, or completely destroyed homes. He was particularly interested in any information that had been received by the homeowners from their insurance companies.

their insurance companies.

He explained his task and some of the possible financial help that might be made available to them if the county is declared a disaster area by the federal government.

Davis explained the SBA is the only federal agency that makes direct loans of any kind for the replacement of homes and businesses damaged or destroyed in a disaster such as a tor-nado:

He stressed that he was not making any estimates of damage in the county, but merely an on-site survey of the damage and the subsequent report from which a determination can be made by federal officials as to whether or not the county will be declared a disaster area.

Davis also said that homeowers be through the damaged area trying to obtain remodeling or rebuilding contracts. He said no one should give any money to anyone for work in advance, nor should any contracts or similar papers be signed without obtaining several estimates from known, reputable contractors.

A MATTER OF CHOICE

OF CHOICE

• THE ANSWER to the question, "How Much Should a Funeral Cost?" can be answered by another question." How much should an automobile cost?" one man wants a Chevrolet, another a Cadillac. 'According to his neighbors, a certain man seemingly can't afford a Volkswagen, yet he drives a Lincoln. Can a funeral director tell a family who want a particular casket and a number of special items and services that they cannot have them unless they can prove that their combined income are in the higher brackets? No more than an automobile salesman can tell a man who wants a fully equipped sport of the most attractive things about Democracy is that it offers an atmosphere where freedom of choice is possible. New swimming pool among capital projects at SIUE

Plans for several noninstructional capital improvements at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, to be funded from nonappropriated funds, were approved Thursday by the SIU Board of Trustees for submission to the Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE).

Board of Higher Education (IBHE). University officers pointed out that IBHE procedures require approval of plans for projects of this type, including specifics of financing, but initiation of some projects included in the plans include in the plans include a proposal for additional student housing, costing $7.6 million, with financing through the sale of revenue bonds. The project would consist of $4 additional units to accommodate $72 single students.

other plans approved include: relocation of the Day Care Center from Building 405 to Building 420 at Tower Lake Housing, to be financed through revenue bond operations, total cost $25.000.

$25,000; Modification of service drive to Supporting Services Building and addition of lights along campus walks, to be financed by parking decal fees and fines, total cost $20,000; and Construction of an outdoor swimming pool at the Tower Lake recreational area, and other student recreational facilities, to be funded from student fees, total $700,000.

student fees, total cost 5700,000. University officers explained that the noninstructional capital improvement plans of the University represent the ongoing remodeling, rehabilitating, and equipping of various facilities used for functions that are auxiliary and supportive of the University's primary roles.

These facilities include University housing, student centers, parking lots, athletic and special purpose facilities, and auxiliary enterprise and service operation facilities.

For the most part, the source of funds for these projects is from operating revenues of the facilities, plus student fees. Since the facilities are not funded by the state, the board and the IBHE require the establishment and maintenance of an ongoing plan to keep the efficient.

Thus, there is a greater chance for damage in a warm spring. In a cool spring, the alfalfa tends to grow faster than the weevil activity, in effect growing away from the weevil.
Alfalfa weevil eggs start to hatch at 200 degree days.

The Weather Service already reports 200 degree days in this area. Farmers should look for signs of tip feeding and defoliation, and look for the larvae themselves. If 25 percent of the plants bave leaf skeletonization, then the use of an insecticide is justified.

use of an insecticide is justified.

As soon as the spring planting season begins, Madison County farmers will be handling pesticides on a regular bais.

Farmers need to be aware that they can be exposed to pesticide in three ways: skin contact, infinalation and incomparts of the state of t rubber boots and a rubber apron.

Good ventilation while mixing or loading pesticides will prevent inhalation problems. To avoid accidental ingestion, wash your hands thoroughly before eating or smoking. Pesticide residue on your hands can be transferred to food and then swallowed.

What If All The Stores In Our Town Closed Up?

It could happen.

In some towns it already has happened... because local people did most of their shoping OUT of town. We all know of communities with lots of empty stores. And, empty stores mean less tax support...a lot less!

Did you ever stop to think about how much of our community's taxes are paid by our businesses? If they were no longer paying their share, think how much MORE your taxes would increase to pay for essential local services.

If they no longer made charitable donations to groups to which you belong, how much MORE would YOU have to pay?

A healthy business community benefits everyone. Shop here at home.

License fees, some of which haven't been changed in 10 years, also need updating, he says.

John States also has some ideas about how to avoid confrontations with the occupational groups he is charged with regulating. First, he plans not to become involved in "emotional" issues, like the recent state's licensing system for graduate nurses should be modified to allow Canadiantrained nurses to work in Illinois hospitals. A shortage of registered nurses, which still plaques the state's hospitals, had become a critical problem.

Election night tallies indicated victories for Harry Briggs over Richard Kismer for supervisor, Donald Ridgeway for town clerk over incumbent Douglas Teetor, Highway Commissioner Frank Mehelic over Supervisor Davis for commissioner, and Assessor Carl Macios over David Partney.

Also, it appeared on the election night that Township Collector Freida Ballew had defeated Norman Hall, but some believe that Hall is the winner for the commission on the Town Board of Trustees going to Helen Hawkins, Don Wilson, Joseph Garcia and incumbent W. Lee Adams over Jan Langerstein and incumbents Andy Besserman, Jerry L. Adams and James F. Counts. Some voters believe Langenstein's revised vote total may exceed that of W. Lee Adams.

Pending the outcome of the retabulation, most of the potential winners have limited their celebrating and most of the possible losers have muted their sorrow over the election outcome. None of them will know for sure until after the retabulation and then the official canvass.

Nick Nolte

By DICK MAURICE Nick Nolte, the star of such hits as "The Deep" and "North Dallas Forty," recently interviewed by Dick Maurice.

The lanky actor's mood was initially jovial — "Has the beer come yet?" Nolte's opening remark — but as the golden boy with the matinee idol looks delved into subjects like success, Hollywood style and the big bucks in commercial television, you could hear a pin drop MAURICE: You played a lot of football in college. What made you decide to switch from that to acting?

NOLTE: I finally realized you can't keep playing ball all your life. But if you saw "North Dallas Forty," you can see it's still one of my

MAURICE: Why did you refuse to do a "Rich Man, Poor Man" series after the mini-series was such a suc-

NOLTE: TV just comes at you to make the quickest buck. There's pressure from your own agent to do things over and over if they were once successful. I couldn't do that. And you know that series failed. My instinct was right, thank God.

But there's a constant pressure in this business to repeat your last success. It's strange ... and corrupt.

MAURICE: Were you really offered the role of Superman? And if your were, why didn't you do it? NOLTE: No tights, baby!

Actually, I just didn't know what to do with that script. I wasn't cut out for it and I felt I couln't bring anything new to the myth. And that script had been around a lot

MAURICE: Do producers and directors throw a lot of scripts your way now?

NOLTE: Naw, not really, I mean, directors bring material to Al Pacino, but that doesn't happen to me a lot. So I have to buy my own

- like :"North Dallas Forty - and develop it myself.

MAURICE: How do you feel about being a sex sym-

NOLTE: I am? Aw, you just have to throw that kind of stuff away.

For me, it's like the pres-sure about the Academy Award. You tell yourself you're not in the business for that kind of thing, but then somebody tells you there might be a nomination and you think, "Oh, God" Then you don't get the normination and you realize: "Oh, I got trapped into that!"

trapped into that!"
MAURICE: What about all the attention you're given from women, now that you're famous?

NOLTE: Here's my approach on that level. What if you went to bed with a dif-ferent chick night ater night after night? Does that do anything for you? It really doesn't — at least not anything of substance. You wake up lonely anyway.

When you first come into your sexuality the impulse is so strong that you want to find out exactly what this is. So, boy, you're out ther trying to get after it, usng any trick you can. But that only lasts for a short time.

There's got to be some kind of substance, somebody you can lay down with and spend some time with. And discover a little bit with.

our views on relationships woman that exists in 1981? What do you think of the new liberated woman?

NOLTE: Oh, they're good women, Jesus, there are good, solid women - if we're talking about the same kind of women that I know.

I like the personal strength of women, and sometimes, I rely on it. It's a myth that the male is a being that can do all, be all. He has worries and doubts and fears, and needs a mate to complete himself - just as a woman needs a mate tocomplete herself. And the liberated woman is, I think, conscious of this. And the more conscious a relationship is, the more conscious it can become. The more unconscious it is, the more neurotic it seems to be.

This is not to say that love, as a feeling, isn't the greatest thing in the world. But to be knowledgeable about what harms another being and to be responsible about not harming them is a conscious decision And if you can get that into your consciousness than there's a great responsibility and respect that takes place.

MAURICE: Do you think the woman of today wants to take on that responsibility totally for herself, to be the equal - if not the dominant partner in a relationship? NOLTE: Well, you know, you can't ever really get away from the traditional roles. They'll always exist. But I like to think that the roles do not have to dominate the relationship even though you have to be aware of them Relationships survive if they've become old and wise and mellow and aware. It's a MATIRICE: What kinds of attributes do you find attractive in women?

NOLTE: I like a woman who knows and is aware, one who's able to communicate

Do you like your job?

Let's

One of the major choices people make is the way they earn their living. This can be a sound decision or one of the biggest mistakes

For most persons this choice happens by accident. Some people may feel trapped because they find that they are miserable in their job, and have discovered that life is too short and too valuable to endure the best third of each day doing something they can barely tolerate.

There are many persons who feel their jobs are just work. They wish they could earn their living doing what they enjoy. I see book-keepers who would like to be salesmen, teachers who wish they were cabinet-makers, and businessmen who want to be teachers. We grow and change and what was satisfying years ago may not be ing today.

The problem in this is that people who are in a job they do not like for a long period can become very moody, nervous, or they tire easily and become a victim of in digestion and insomnia. If this emotional pressure is continued, they may soon have feelings of frustration and grow sour on life.

to change to a completely new line of activity. A businessman was on the verge of a nervous breakdown. Part was dealing with things when what he basically wanted to do was to dea with people. I recommended that he stay in the field he knew, which was busine management. Using that skill he found that he could find a job where he dealt di-rectly with people. He found a job as a business and personnel manager of a hospital and is now a happy man co working with people.

The main thing is to devise a plan which lets you shift the emphasis on one career to another area over a period of time. Make time work for you, but when you start making excuses for postponing action you are postponing action you are doomed to stay where you are. Excuses are almost universally one of these "I don't have the money." "I don't have the time," or "My family won't let me." These are things to talk through with a professional counselor.
